

123. Council of Europe, "Criminal Law Convention on Corruption: Strasbourg, 21.I.1999", January 27, 1999, <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/Treaties/Html/173.htm> (accessed January 29, 2009).
124. United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, "UN Convention against Corruption," December 4, 2000, <http://www.unodc.org/unodc/en/treaties/CAC/index.html> (accessed January 29, 2009).
125. Kseniya Nechayeva, "Government Could Not Care Less about President's Instructions for Combating Corruption," Gazeta, June 15, 2008.
126. Steven Lee Myers, "A New Cycle of Bribes and Purges," New York Times, June 11, 2006.
127. Quoted in Jonas Bernstein, "Will Russia's Next Anti-Corruption Campaign Succeed Where Others Failed?" Eurasia Daily Monitor, January 30, 2008.
128. Ibid.
129. Vladimir Isachenov, "Putin Choice Criticizes 'Legal Nihilism,'" Guardian, January 22, 2008.
130. "Russia: Zubkov Urges Lowering Admin Barriers to Combat Corruption," Tass, February 19, 2008. When one hears such rhetoric, it is only natural to wonder why Putin selected an individual like Zubkov to become prime minister. Putin may have selected Zubkov's predecessor, Mikhail Fradkov, because he has an "intelligence background" and he lacked any constituency that would preclude him from being replaced at Putin's whim. Just before Zubkov was named prime minister, he was the head of RosFinMonitoring. He is an individual who may have a great deal of information that can be used to discredit or prosecute Russian government officials, and, if so inclined, he would be in a good position to provide such information to counterparts working for foreign governments. Being "rewarded" with the prime ministry may have been one way for Putin to ensure Zubkov's loyalty. "Russia Gets a New Prime Minister," Economist, September 12 2007, http://www.economist.com/daily/news/displaystory.cfm?story_id=9790157 (accessed August 1, 2008).
131. Ibid.
132. "Investigator: Corrupt Officials' Income Is Third of National Budget," Prime-Tass English Newswire, June 6, 2008.
133. Bovt, "The Stick, but Not the Carrot," Russia Profile, October 15, 2008.
134. Ibid.
135. Vladimir Ryzhkov, "We Have a Package. It Is Not a Bomb. Anticorruption Draft Laws Will Only Affect Power Groupings' Relationships among Themselves," Novaya Gazeta, October 20, 2008.
136. Ibid.
137. Nigerian Attorney Bolaji Owasanoue of the Nigerian Institute of Advanced Studies (unpublished remarks, International Bar Association Annual Meeting, Buenos Aires, Argentina, October 16, 2008).
138. Ackerman, Corruption and Government, 229 (see n45).