I spent 30 years with the LAPD, retiring as the Officer-in-Charge Lieutenant II, Homicide -Special Section, Robbery-Homicide Division in 2012. During my career I have led some of the most elite police investigative units in American law enforcement. Among my many assignments I was the Officer-in-Charge of the FBI Violent Crime Task Force, Criminal Investigation Section, Joint Terrorism Task Force, the Special Investigation Section and the Homicide Special Section, Robbery Homicide Section.

I am also a California state licensed private investigator and was also the CEO of Critical Solutions Protective Services Group from 2010 to 2017, a licensed security company that provided both security guard and off-duty police officers to two of the most high-profile retail centers in California.

My private investigation clients have included many Fortune 500 and entertainment industry companies and individuals, as well as insurance carriers and defense attorneys. As a consequence, I have handled frequent and numerous confidential matters with appropriate discretion.

My expertise includes complex police investigations and accountability, Brady issues and interpretation, criminal conspiracy, public safety employment, use of force (including deadly force) by police officers and security guards, general police tactics, special undercover tactics, kidnapping, private security and private investigators' legal and other liabilities and their labor practices.

I have worked nationally and internationally in the public and have maintained strong networks of professional relationships in both. In the Entertainment Industry I have performed as an on-camera expert for a History Channel limited series and am currently the technical consultant for ABC's Stumptown.
